

Madison Biggs

UNDERGRAD: MIDDLE TENNESSEE STATE UNIVERSITY

GRAD SCHOOL: BELMONT UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF LAW

LEGAL INTERN

MAY - AUGUST 2019

Madison, a proud Nashville resident and Middle Tennessee State University graduate, earned his Bachelor of Arts in Political Science. Before law school, he gained valuable experience working as a circuit criminal court clerk for two years.

While attending Belmont University College of Law, Madison's passion for leadership and community engagement inspired him to serve as president of several organizations, including the Belmont Legal Aid Society, the Black Law Student Association, and the American Constitution Society.

Madison is so proud of the work TJC does and continues to do. He decided to intern there for his first legal internship (May-August 2019) because of his passion to help those less fortunate. The Tennessee Justice Center does just that – representing hundreds of thousands of Tennesseans against an over-corrosive and disingenuous state government and protecting their right to accessible healthcare.

He currently serves as criminal court attorney with the Nashville Public Defender's Office. Madison enjoys continuing his representation of those less well-off and engaging his community to strive for better policy and law.